

Notes on COVID-19

- A final decision by the music groups on participation and the associated financial commitments are only required a few weeks before the event date and are clearly indicated in each detailed description. At this point, under normal circumstances, possible restrictions at the time of the event can also be foreseen.
- The local corona regulations valid at the time of the event will be observed by music&friends and may, if necessary, result in changes to the service description.
- Restrictions imposed by local authorities do not constitute a restriction of services if a form of service is changed but not reduced, e.g. instead of an announced buffet a served buffet or a 3-course menu. All participants undertake to comply with existing local regulations.
- Participating music groups will draw up lists required by the authorities, e.g. list of participants for Covid tracking etc. It is expected that the 3-G rules (tested, recovered or vaccinated) and the AHA formula (keep your distance, observe hygiene and wear a mask in everyday life) will apply for a longer period of time.
- music&friends will inform participating music groups immediately of any changes and the associated consequences, but will not accept any legal liability.
- music&friends will make every effort to minimise the effort required by the participating music groups due to necessary local regulations and to enable musical activities with as few restrictions as possible.
